

ADVERTISEMENT MENTION.

Chun Opera House—"Convict 112." Pink social—Calvary Bandit Church, to night. Industrial Lodge, I.O.O.F.—To-night. New York, "The Star," "The Star," "The Star," Company V, First Artillery—To-morrow night. Union Lodge, F. & A.M.—To-night.

Action Sale.
By Bell & Co., 10 A. M. to-day.

Business Advertisements.
Bed House—A day of surprises. Schultz' beer hall Wissman's saloon. The William Tell House. John Doe's County Assessor. Notice of street work. Save the date—Aug. 20th. Wanted—Actor for country shop. For sale or let—House and lot. Weinstock & Lubin—Towels.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

Whirling Psychrometer.

Sergeant Barwick has received from General Hazen, Chief Signal Officer of the Army, a whirling psychrometer, for the purpose of more accurately determining vapor tension, dew point, and relative humidity of the atmosphere. This psychrometer consists of two thermometers placed upon a revolving machine, and at each observation they are to be revolved at the rate of one hundred turns to a minute, one thousand turns to an hour, and the other three. General Orders No. 17, issued by the Chief Signal Officer, say: "When a carefully conducted series of observations are made with those instruments, with the sun, moon, and stars in view, it is found that the temperature of the dew point obtained more nearly coincides with the readings of the standard dew point apparatus. It has been decided to secure a more perfect version by moving the thermometer and its thermometers of the Signal Service upon whirling machines, by means of which the bulbs are made to describe a circle of two or three feet in diameter, and come into view which will be affected by larger amounts of the surrounding air than if stationary. This machine, with the instruments attached, will be known as the 'whirling psychrometer.'"

A Puzzle Solved.

C. E. Klink, the well-known apothecary, was astonished several days ago when his barber informed him that his hair was turning yellow. Mr. Klink had heard of cases in which people's hair, after being gray, had taken a new start and returned to its natural color, but yellow would scarcely fit his case. He concluded, however, that he was a descendant of his dead ancestors. Subsequently the astonishing discovery was made that the hair on the opposite side of his head was turning green! This led him to the theory that, although he could not bring himself to make a trace of Irish in his lineage. It was getting to be a serious matter, for at every turn he was to be gobbled up and incarcerated in a dungeon, and a thousand schemes of escape and evasion were carried out in uniform good taste. Especially good was the pronunciation, which, aiming at perfection, evinced the just instinct of the teacher of the theory, and effect developed the fact that the inner band of his hat had done the mischief; perspiration having caused it to develop yellow and green colors, which dyed his hair so effectually that it will be some time before all trace of the effect disappears.

Selling Liquor to Miners.

Two boys, named Oscar Worsham and Frank McConnell, aged respectively 17 and 15 years, were arrested Monday afternoon by Deputy Sheriff Broderick, who then drags on the street and took them to the station-house. They have been working in the racing stables on the grant, but lost their situations. Yesterday they had so barely sufficient to give an account of themselves, and after interrogating them, Chief Dilman directed officer Ferrell to attend to the case and arrest the party who sold them the liquor. One of the boys accompanied the officer and pointed out the stable, the northern entrance of which is M Street, owned by Thomas Anderson, as the place, and subsequently Anderson was arrested for selling liquor to minors, and gave bond for his appearance in court. The boy says that they each had about $100, and that they took a bottle of whisky, which they took away and drank. Anderson says that they did not drink the premises, but purchased a bottle of liquor with the money which he sold to the stable, and assumed was to be taken to the stable for the use of other parties.

Police Court.

In the Police Court yesterday much time was occupied in the trial of John C. Ryan for disturbing the peace of Mrs. D. Lawson, in the vicinity of Third and K streets. The jury found him guilty, and was asked to assess damages, which they said to have stood at the last bail, $400, for conviction and four for acquittal, but on one ballot they were nine for conviction. The case was then continued until this morning, as was also the charge of disturbing the peace of the same defendant. R. H. McCull, previously convicted of disturbing the peace, was fined $2.50. May Roberts, alias Chin-ku-Wan, was arraigned on a charge of having sold a bottle of whisky, which she says she did not drink, to a Chinaman, and that she took a bottle of whisky, which they took away and drank. Anderson says that they did not drink the premises, but purchased a bottle of liquor with the money which he sold to the stable, and assumed was to be taken to the stable for the use of other parties.

Row at a Brickyard.

Yesterday morning a Chinaman called upon Constable Harvey and informed him that on the previous day there had been a big fight at the brickyard, half a mile below Freeport, between the white and colored employees, resulting in the white and colored, while only one of the white men received a scalp cut and other injuries. It appears that a Chinaman took a wheelbarrow and a shovel, and, under the command of a colored employee, started to work at Woodland, a neighboring suburb. Monday evening, by taking seven or eight grains of morphine, but the physicians summoned succeeded in saving her life. She became weary of living because her lover, fearing exposure, had abandoned her. Justice Seelye of Washington notified yesterday morning that the body of a man had been found near the canal bank of the Elkhorn ranch, several miles up the river. He went up to hold an inquest on the remains, and found a Chinaman of unknown Chinaman, who had hanged himself to a tree on the bank of the canal.

The National Amateur Press Association meets in San Francisco to-morrow afternoon, and will be held over for three days. It is the largest ever held in the city.

Massachusetts, editor of Young America, a very popular amateur paper, and that would rank well with many professional literary and critical journals. The number of subscribers is now 10,000. Master Andrew Phillips, known as "the Master Simon," was deserving of high praise. Misses Alsp and Fritz' instrumental solo, and a vocal solo by Misses Lewis and Simmons, was a great success. The teacher of the Sacramento Grammar School, the success of the musical part of the programme was assured.

The class meetings of City School Superintendent Board and of A. Helbron expressed entire satisfaction with the progress made by the classes.

Elk Grove Grange's Sentiments.

The following resolutions have been adopted by Elk Grove Grange:

Resolved, That the appropriation of water by individuals or corporations, without proper authority, is in violation of law and justice—is confiscation—and as a public policy it should be prohibited. Resolved, That the stability of government and property, this last decade of the century, depends upon the maintenance of a people loyal to just law and order.

Resolved, That in the state's right of eminent domain, it has been the general practice of the legislature to make no provision for the payment of necessary exequities rights for that admittedly great use.

Resolved, That the attempt to transfer a purely judicial question (mipar) from the Courts to the rostrum and the ballot is lawless, revolutionary, and dangerous to the welfare of the state.

Resolved, That the stability of government and property, this last decade of the century, depends upon the maintenance of a people loyal to just law and order.

Resolved, That in the state's right of eminent domain, it has been the general practice of the legislature to make no provision for the payment of necessary exequities rights for that admittedly great use.

Resolved, That in all irrigation legislation the rights of navigation must be guarded.

Resolved, That the attempt to transfer a purely judicial question (mipar) from the Courts to the rostrum and the ballot is lawless, revolutionary, and dangerous to the welfare of the state.

Resolved, That the stability of government and property, this last decade of the century, depends upon the maintenance of a people loyal to just law and order.

Resolved, That in the state's right of eminent domain, it has been the general practice of the legislature to make no provision for the payment of necessary exequities rights for that admittedly great use.

Resolved, That in all irrigation legislation the rights of navigation must be guarded.

Resolved, That the attempt to transfer a purely judicial question (mipar) from the Courts to the rostrum and the ballot is lawless, revolutionary, and dangerous to the welfare of the state.

Resolved, That the stability of government and property, this last decade of the century, depends upon the maintenance of a people loyal to just law and order.

Resolved, That in the state's right of eminent domain, it has been the general practice of the legislature to make no provision for the payment of necessary exequities rights for that admittedly great use.

Resolved, That the attempt to transfer a purely judicial question (mipar) from the Courts to the rostrum and the ballot is lawless, revolutionary, and dangerous to the welfare of the state.

Resolved, That the stability of government and property, this last decade of the century, depends upon the maintenance of a people loyal to just law and order.

Resolved, That in the state's right of eminent domain, it has been the general practice of the legislature to make no provision for the payment of necessary exequities rights for that admittedly great use.

Resolved, That the attempt to transfer a purely judicial question (mipar) from the Courts to the rostrum and the ballot is lawless, revolutionary, and dangerous to the welfare of the state.

Resolved, That the stability of government and property, this last decade of the century, depends upon the maintenance of a people loyal to just law and order.

Resolved, That in the state's right of eminent domain, it has been the general practice of the legislature to make no provision for the payment of necessary exequities rights for that admittedly great use.

Resolved, That the attempt to transfer a purely judicial question (mipar) from the Courts to the rostrum and the ballot is lawless, revolutionary, and dangerous to the welfare of the state.

Resolved, That the stability of government and property, this last decade of the century, depends upon the maintenance of a people loyal to just law and order.

Resolved, That in the state's right of eminent domain, it has been the general practice of the legislature to make no provision for the payment of necessary exequities rights for that admittedly great use.

Resolved, That the attempt to transfer a purely judicial question (mipar) from the Courts to the rostrum and the ballot is lawless, revolutionary, and dangerous to the welfare of the state.

Resolved, That the stability of government and property, this last decade of the century, depends upon the maintenance of a people loyal to just law and order.

Resolved, That in the state's right of eminent domain, it has been the general practice of the legislature to make no provision for the payment of necessary exequities rights for that admittedly great use.

Resolved, That the attempt to transfer a purely judicial question (mipar) from the Courts to the rostrum and the ballot is lawless, revolutionary, and dangerous to the welfare of the state.

Resolved, That the stability of government and property, this last decade of the century, depends upon the maintenance of a people loyal to just law and order.

Resolved, That in the state's right of eminent domain, it has been the general practice of the legislature to make no provision for the payment of necessary exequities rights for that admittedly great use.

Resolved, That the attempt to transfer a purely judicial question (mipar) from the Courts to the rostrum and the ballot is lawless, revolutionary, and dangerous to the welfare of the state.

Resolved, That the stability of government and property, this last decade of the century, depends upon the maintenance of a people loyal to just law and order.

Resolved, That in the state's right of eminent domain, it has been the general practice of the legislature to make no provision for the payment of necessary exequities rights for that admittedly great use.

Resolved, That the attempt to transfer a purely judicial question (mipar) from the Courts to the rostrum and the ballot is lawless, revolutionary, and dangerous to the welfare of the state.

Resolved, That the stability of government and property, this last decade of the century, depends upon the maintenance of a people loyal to just law and order.

Resolved, That in the state's right of eminent domain, it has been the general practice of the legislature to make no provision for the payment of necessary exequities rights for that admittedly great use.

Resolved, That the attempt to transfer a purely judicial question (mipar) from the Courts to the rostrum and the ballot is lawless, revolutionary, and dangerous to the welfare of the state.

Resolved, That the stability of government and property, this last decade of the century, depends upon the maintenance of a people loyal to just law and order.

Resolved, That in the state's right of eminent domain, it has been the general practice of the legislature to make no provision for the payment of necessary exequities rights for that admittedly great use.

Resolved, That the attempt to transfer a purely judicial question (mipar) from the Courts to the rostrum and the ballot is lawless, revolutionary, and dangerous to the welfare of the state.

Resolved, That the stability of government and property, this last decade of the century, depends upon the maintenance of a people loyal to just law and order.

Resolved, That in the state's right of eminent domain, it has been the general practice of the legislature to make no provision for the payment of necessary exequities rights for that admittedly great use.

Resolved, That the attempt to transfer a purely judicial question (mipar) from the Courts to the rostrum and the ballot is lawless, revolutionary, and dangerous to the welfare of the state.

Resolved, That the stability of government and property, this last decade of the century, depends upon the maintenance of a people loyal to just law and order.

Resolved, That in the state's right of eminent domain, it has been the general practice of the legislature to make no provision for the payment of necessary exequities rights for that admittedly great use.

Resolved, That the attempt to transfer a purely judicial question (mipar) from the Courts to the rostrum and the ballot is lawless, revolutionary, and dangerous to the welfare of the state.

Resolved, That the stability of government and property, this last decade of the century, depends upon the maintenance of a people loyal to just law and order.

Resolved, That in the state's right of eminent domain, it has been the general practice of the legislature to make no provision for the payment of necessary exequities rights for that admittedly great use.

Resolved, That the attempt to transfer a purely judicial question (mipar) from the Courts to the rostrum and the ballot is lawless, revolutionary, and dangerous to the welfare of the state.

Resolved, That the stability of government and property, this last decade of the century, depends upon the maintenance of a people loyal to just law and order.

Resolved, That in the state's right of eminent domain, it has been the general practice of the legislature to make no provision for the payment of necessary exequities rights for that admittedly great use.

Resolved, That the attempt to transfer a purely judicial question (mipar) from the Courts to the rostrum and the ballot is lawless, revolutionary, and dangerous to the welfare of the state.

Resolved, That the stability of government and property, this last decade of the century, depends upon the maintenance of a people loyal to just law and order.

Resolved, That in the state's right of eminent domain, it has been the general practice of the legislature to make no provision for the payment of necessary exequities rights for that admittedly great use.

Resolved, That the attempt to transfer a purely judicial question (mipar) from the Courts to the rostrum and the ballot is lawless, revolutionary, and dangerous to the welfare of the state.

Resolved, That the stability of government and property, this last decade of the century, depends upon the maintenance of a people loyal to just law and order.

Resolved, That in the state's right of eminent domain, it has been the general practice of the legislature to make no provision for the payment of necessary exequities rights for that admittedly great use.

Resolved, That the attempt to transfer a purely judicial question (mipar) from the Courts to the rostrum and the ballot is lawless, revolutionary, and dangerous to the welfare of the state.

Resolved, That the stability of government and property, this last decade of the century, depends upon the maintenance of a people loyal to just law and order.

Resolved, That in the state's right of eminent domain, it has been the general practice of the legislature to make no provision for the payment of necessary exequities rights for that admittedly great use.

Resolved, That the attempt to transfer a purely judicial question (mipar) from the Courts to the rostrum and the ballot is lawless, revolutionary, and dangerous to the welfare of the state.

Resolved, That the stability of government and property, this last decade of the century, depends upon the maintenance of a people loyal to just law and order.

Resolved, That in the state's right of eminent domain, it has been the general practice of the legislature to make no provision for the payment of necessary exequities rights for that admittedly great use.

Resolved, That the attempt to transfer a purely judicial question (mipar) from the Courts to the rostrum and the ballot is lawless, revolutionary, and dangerous to the welfare of the state.

Resolved, That the stability of government and property, this last decade of the century, depends upon the maintenance of a people loyal to just law and order.

Resolved, That in the state's right of eminent domain, it has been the general practice of the legislature to make no provision for the payment of necessary exequities rights for that admittedly great use.

Resolved, That the attempt to transfer a purely judicial question (mipar) from the Courts to the rostrum and the ballot is lawless, revolutionary, and dangerous to the welfare of the state.

Resolved, That the stability of government and property, this last decade of the century, depends upon the maintenance of a people loyal to just law and order.

Resolved, That in the state's right of eminent domain, it has been the general practice of the legislature to make no provision for the payment of necessary exequities rights for that admittedly great use.

Resolved, That the attempt to transfer a purely judicial question (mipar) from the Courts to the rostrum and the ballot is lawless, revolutionary, and dangerous to the welfare of the state.

Resolved, That the stability of government and property, this last decade of the century, depends upon the maintenance of a people loyal to just law and order.

Resolved, That in the state's right of eminent domain, it has been the general practice of the legislature to make no provision for the payment of necessary exequities rights for that admittedly great use.

Resolved, That the attempt to transfer a purely judicial question (mipar) from the Courts to the rostrum and the ballot is lawless, revolutionary, and dangerous to the welfare of the state.

Resolved, That the stability of government and property, this last decade of the century, depends upon the maintenance of a people loyal to just law and order.

Resolved, That in the state's right of eminent domain, it has been the general practice of the legislature to make no provision for the payment of necessary exequities rights for that admittedly great use.

Resolved, That the attempt to transfer a purely judicial question (mipar) from the Courts to the rostrum and the ballot is lawless, revolutionary, and dangerous to the welfare of the state.

Resolved, That the stability of government and property, this

